ARTIST STATEMENT

In my practice, I bridge the tactile precision of craft with uncompromising socio-philosophical artivism. My core medium is epoxy resin, which I treat not merely as a high-gloss coating, but as a dynamic optical lens capable of refracting light, producing caustic underwater effects, and crystallizing suspended emotional states.

Working across a scale from miniatures to monumental interior panels and complex 3D reliefs, I combine dense tactile materials—plaster, resin, clay, mirror chrome, acrylic, and oil. Through them, I speak about pain, isolation, inner freedom, censorship, and the fragility of human presence. It is an honest dialogue with the viewer where ordinary spoken language is blocked or powerless.

SELECTED CONCEPTUAL PROJECTS & ARTIVISM

"February '22" (2022)

Oil, epoxy resin, clay, plaster, markers, chrome, cardboard, pigments

A metaphor for catastrophe, paralysis, and censorship. The transparent resin mass turns into an ice trap cut through by white web-like cracks of total control. At the center is a frozen gesture of a hand trying to break through the ice and a blurred ghost of a palm in the depths, symbolizing the fading of an open voice.

"Deep Rest" (2023)

Acrylic, clay, plaster, epoxy resin, pigments, silicone, art board

A play on meanings between saving peace (Deep rest) and clinical depression (Depressed). A reflection on the boundaries of help and spectator non-intervention in the tradition of Marina Abramović's performances: to extend a hand to a drowning person or watch them sink to the bottom.

"The Last Drop" (2020)

Art board, chrome, epoxy resin, silicone

Monochrome minimalism of extreme psychological tension. The mirror-chromed surface reflects the viewer, making them an accomplice to the moment when the last drop becomes the point of no return.

"Let the Swans Dance" & "Transformation" Series ("Gasoline Rainbow") / "Red Series"

Mixed media, resin, bas-relief, layered pigments

An exploration of historical anxiety, anticipation of change, and the emotional mutation of matter under external shock and pressure.
